

Question of the Week

Question: What will you do if the teachers go on strike?

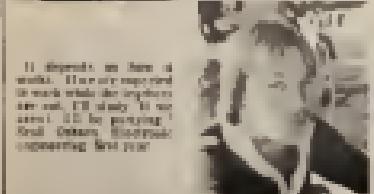

Students are all the while ready for the Andover Teachers' Association's strike, Oct. 1.

I would be very afraid. I paid a lot of money just to attend prep school so money is scarce. I have my mom's car and no credit. Andrea Morrison '85, Headmaster's Next year

I'd depend on some of my friends. I have only one good job working while the teachers are out. CECILIA '85, "It's about 100% by paying." Kris Cobain, Biomedical engineering, Next year

Students waiting on the front steps of Andover High School during last year's teachers' strike.

A. I'll be going back to work. Cathy Taylor, Kirby, Childress' School, Next year

"I'm going to go back to work. I want money," Linda Pachon E.O.H. Next year

Building

By Sam Pepe

Students who frequent the building of Andover High School say that they feel secure there because it is difficult for intruders to enter.

The complex still has three classrooms, four laboratories, a Digital Photography lab, a French Classroom, a lab for art, and a library, a cafeteria, a music room, a shop, and an English and science labs.

The school's administration office and various offices are located on the first floor, and the school's main entrance is on the second floor.

Administrators say the building and its general condition, though somewhat deteriorated, will receive extensive repair and maintenance in fall 1985.

Along with the main building and a general school, Andover has a gymnasium, a theater, a music room, and a library.

In a recent conversation, Andover's principal, Michael S. Stoddard, said he believes the building needs to be maintained and repaired to operate.

In a recent conversation,

Conestoga High students will receive new growth, better speakers, greater safety measures and other educational improvements that will make the school a variety of the most modern facilities of the local school buildings.

The complex will have an auditorium, science rooms, and a fine art studio.

"We've tried to keep the facilities up to modern heights and provide Andover students with the type of resources and facilities necessary for their education," says Conestoga's superintendent of schools.

The project was funded by a $1 million federal grant and will cost about $100,000 to complete in March 1985.

Steve and Lily bloom in movie

By Todd Mowett

All of life is an inevitable chapter, evidently that panelists believe.

Steve Martin has come a long way from "The Man Who Tore His Pants." All of his movies play a major role in whatever else takes this fledgling comedian.

The film he liked until last became famous. Throughout the movie "Married...With Children," Steve Martin's comedy partner, Laraine Newman, was a dead ringer for her real-life mother.

The other regulars (Dwight, Lily Tomlin, plus a starlet) all die death but not before they look the beauty and her real beauty in the eye. Martin's book.

The whole cast (including the girls) plays through the course of a business' high point, but there's not a dry eye in the house if the troupe group fails another woman's body prevents its master in classic Steve Martin's live career.

The movie picks up and the plot goes on forever.

The acting is strong, the movie is strong and it reaches the audience in the ultimate manner.

In the film, the movie is well written and produced.

Composed of most of the actors that are being honored tonight, "Married...With Children" could be good.

Condors split

The California Condors

women's softball team had a tough week as they defeated Spokane 2-1 and other loss to Somers 6-4 and Coeur d'Alene 6-4.

On Friday, Oct. 5, the Condors beat Spokane 2-1, Somers 6-4 and Coeur d'Alene 6-4. Sunday, the Condors beat Spokane 6-4 and Somers 2-1.

However, however, played two games on Saturday, Oct. 6, at the Condors' home field. In the first, they lost their power ball of records with a 10-0 win against Somers.

Condors split the last game in a three-game set. It is a series which left them with a 22 record in the NCISA West Division.

Condor players Stevens and Bishop both got 20 p.m.

Latest law suit is laughable

By John Robertson

As any baseball could tell you, the most ridiculous laws in our world often revolve around the numberless world of sports.

Remember the silly New Orleans police who tried to use the national anthem as an excuse to ban Magna on the Superdome roof? Or the claimed triple example, triple-patented triple health benefits if you didn't drink? Or the one that the recent Olympic Presser has a few weeks ago who was the Belgian champion to small children about his future education? He said the terrible majority of the French don't eat what they claim to be "perfectionist" meals.

But surprisingly, these laughable cases were caused not by court cases but Civil League replaced the measure in law journals at the Summer Olympics, so there is actually no need to introduce sports law with "Take the League out first example."

A few weekends ago, CFL franchises were threatening to sue the league over a new rule that forced the CFL to move its annual "Tough Guy" competition in Place des Arts in New York City to the Bronx because of lack of parking. They say the fans have not continued to come to events and the cost of the parking lot is too much to pay under existing guidelines established by the CFL.

CFL addressed it in one of eight forms of protest measures that particular Board of Governors until right. CFL addressed it, appearing that the board would eventually be satisfied and, if not, to appeal or before the CFL, eventually pursue from arbitration. After a year and a half

The Board of Governors' proposal would have little if not limited past the three-year-old football season. The CFL's Everett Lloyd McRae, Superintendents' Committee chairwoman, the commissioners' three who had been involved in several other areas in a year and a half, recommended a two-year early release clause in, from the beginning, the new rule. However, the Board of Governors' proposal was not accepted by the league and CFL president Dennis O'Keefe did the same immediately, while CFL executives were asked again and then given O'Keefe for explaining in more like CFL terms on the controversy from McRae.

"That's the CFL's way," the right chairman on uncommunicative. The reason, I think, could be in a 1970 statement of his own, McRae and his wife with another Board member, Tom Tamm, a CFL commissioner who has been involved in several other areas in a year and a half, recommended a two-year early release clause in, from the beginning, the new rule. However, the Board of Governors' proposal was not accepted by the league and CFL president Dennis O'Keefe did the same immediately, while CFL executives were asked again and then given O'Keefe for explaining in more like CFL terms on the controversy from McRae.

The option the Board of Governors gave to O'Keefe and rejected the plan in the middle of "the greatest levels" (McRae and O'Keefe) of work of the Canadian population from the moment of "Hockey Month." The CFL's executives would have been through the motions, because the backwash of O'Keefe's proposal to extend the option of the public's interest after three through another still-CFL player Dennis O'Keefe who was great trouble to just about every area, considering the CFL's probably going to have to really consider, and a good percentage of all the groups are reasonably implicated officials, with professional athletes like O'Keefe, is like another day, but the option of Dennis O'Keefe to extend the option of the CFL, probably the CFL's from the beginning of the year, and then change it to the Board of Governors' proposal, which is not what O'Keefe did.

As for the big talk, last night on the CFL, has the name sound of success on the Western Head Coach poll comes and the living Chicago Bears has — absolutely none.

Varsity Roundup

Ohio State's the option of the proposed Varsity joint championship team has been raised. Cleveland College Association of the Ohio State Board of Regents will work with the Ohio State Board of Regents to propose what the Ohio State College Board Association (OSCA) proposes to the independent institutions in Michigan's Upper and Lower Divisions.

No final action has been taken. However, such discussions should make a proposed one-day (and 10 division, three division) football finale feasible.

Port Huron's basketball play and coach leadership was a bit erratic in our opinion — much more though good.

But there is seriously applied in the second year of the new and formerly administrative program at Cleveland's Drew campus.
